The world is on wheels. When I was a little girl, my father used to tell me the world is like a beautiful scented orange and every one smells it. First your turn then someone else's. So maybe for this reason the world is round and full of diversity.

At first I believed what my father said. But I'm not a little girl anymore. Now I know that the world is like a round and scented orange but I also know that some people smell it all the time and others never.
